

A High-Performance Culture Requires High Octane Managers

You hired (or inherited) a team of people who are unique individuals. They each think differently, they process data differently, and they each respond to you as a manager in different ways.

Why then, do you try to manage as if everyone were exactly like you ?

World-class managers instinctively know that to be successful they must relate to their team members as individuals and provide TLC (Training, Leading and Coaching) to produce results; they know how to communicate expectations in a manner that supports the employee's unique life experience and goals.

The rest of us need a toolkit.

The T.L.C. Management Workshop will ... Give You the Toolkit and Produce Positive Results!

"This was the best training I've ever received. Thanks!"

"The seminar completely changed the way I relate to my team members".

"This is the first workshop I've attended that provided a workable plan for actually using my new skills."

"The workshop used real-world examples that actually make sense".

Building effective management skills starts with understanding the personality traits that make each member of your team unique. Through the use of tools that accurately measure your interpersonal effectiveness, you will begin to understand how your behavior is impacting the members of your team.

The T.L.C. Performance Management Workshop covers the following topics:

- Training for Excellence
- Leadership Principles
- Coaching to Influence Desired Behavior
- Understanding Yourself and Others
- Effective Communication
- Team Building
- Commitment and Accountability Exercise

Through interactive activities and exercises, the T.L.C. Management Workshop is delivered in a high-energy format that is certain to keep your attention.

The workshop is custom-designed to ensure you learn real-world tools and techniques that translate into actionable insights that become power habits over time.

The problem with one-size fits all, pre-packaged training is that it is difficult to relate to the subject when the examples rarely make sense. Our staff takes the time to design the workshop to meet your specific business needs and fit with your unique corporate culture.

To supercharge your high performance teams you need high octane fuel. This workshop provides the exact ingredients for success for you and your team of direct reports to engage and excel.
